What are you looking for in your next position answer

One of the interview questions you may be asked is what you are looking for in your next job. The interviewer wants to know whether your goals are a match for company's needs. Prepare to respond by comparing your interests and goals to the requirements listed in the job posting. That way, you can offer a personal response specifically tailored to the job for which you're applying.

What makes you unique creative answer. How are u creative. What makes you creative answers.

World would be a boring place without creative people. And the same is true for every workplace. But it isn't only about making practical jokes and having fun, or about decorating the office for Halloween. It is much more than that.... Business landscape has become incredibly competitive in the recent decade. Profit margins are often razor-thin, and it isn't easy to stand out, with a product, or with a way how a company creates it, promotes it, sells it, etc. Creative people can make all the difference here, proposing new concepts and ideas, and helping the company to find their niche in a saturated market. That's why creativity matters—in almost every department of a corporation, and hiring managers may inquire about it in an interview. We have a complete list of creative thinking interview questions online, but in this article we will focus on one question in particular: How creative are you? Let's proceed directly to 7 sample answers. Working on the list, I tried to include answers for both creative people and people who were blessed with different talents. I also include some unconventional answers, and answers fitting for people without any previous working experience. I hope you will find on the list some inspiration for your own genuine interview answer, even if you happen to lack the creativity, and excel in other areas instead... 7 sample answers to "How Creative Are You?" interview question I think that my portfolio demonstrates it better than any words I could tell you here. Look at the latest campaigns I've worked on. These designs are completely unique, and some of them had a huge impact on the eventual success of our marketing campaigns. Would you like me to elaborate on any of them, explaining why I chose this or that design, and what goals I followed with it? I consider myself a creative soul, though I did not have a chance to express my creativity in my last job. A big corporation, they assigned me a certain set of relatively boring tasks in MS Excel, and I had to work on them day in day out. Of course we had team meetings, and I tried to propose some interesting changes to the processes, but you know how it works in a big corporation... Several people have to approve everything, and you eventually end up waiting ages for any changes to take place. It is one of the reasons why I decided to quit the job. Sure enough, they paid me well, but for me it is more important to have an ability to express my creativity at work. And I know that I will have a much better chance to do so in a smaller company. That's why I am applying for a job with you. Honestly speaking, creativity does not belong to my strengths. Now it doesn't mean that I never suggest anything, or do not try to improve the way the job is done. But I lack experience, and at this stage of my career I prefer to learn from more experienced colleagues, and follow their example at work. Maybe when I get older and understand the ins and outs of corporate finance, I will develop more creative approach to work. For the time being, however, it is how it is, and I honestly do not consider it as a disadvantage. At the end of the day, this isn't rocket science, and it makes no sense trying to reinvent the wheel. At least in my opinion... Well, this is my first job application, and I haven't had a chance yet to test my creativity at work. You know how it goes at the college—you have to learn the subjects, the formulas, the calculations. With an exception of your thesis, there's not much room for creativeness. But I understand it is important to be creative and come up with new ideas, and hope to get a chance to develop my creativity in the job. I consider myself very creative, especially in an artistic sense. Drawing is my biggest hobby, and I also play a couple of musical instruments, piano and saxophone. But I rarely play according to the sheets. I like to improvise, create my own songs, and I enjoy the process immensely. The only job I had so far wast in a fast food restaurant, while I was still studying at a college. As you can imagine, there's no room for creativity in such a job. I sincerely hope to have a chance to apply my creativity to the work I do, and that's the main reason why I decided to apply for a job with you. I think others should consider that. My former managers for example, or my colleagues. I definitely suggested some important improvements to the production process in my last job, and they resulted in higher productivity in the workplace. But I try to stay humble, and at the end of the day there's always room for improvement. I cannot tell you how creative I am, but I can definitely tell you that I strive to improve every important ability at work, and creativeness definitely makes the list of such abilities. My strengths are responsibility, attention to detail, and honesty. Creativity does not make the list, and I always try to be realistic about my skills, and my chances to succeed in a job. It is one of the reasons why I apply for a job of an office assistant with you. I honestly believe that creativeness plays a little role in this job. Because you do not need to be creative to type text into MS Word, or to answer basic correspondence, or to take care of other common office duties. In my opinion, everyone should be aware of their strengths and weaknesses, and choose their job accordingly. That's exactly what I try to do in my life. Portfolio can help you big time If you apply for any job in art, marketing, design, or in a similar field, I strongly suggest you to prepare a portfolio of your best works. It can be both online and offline, and we have a good article dedicated to the topic of creating an amazing portfolio here: Professional portfolio - your ace in the sleeve. Check it out if you aren't sure how to make one. Anyway, we people are visual beings. To see something once is better than to hear about it a thousand times, as a famous saying goes. When presenting your works in the interviews, and trying to demonstrate your creativity, do not forget to give a comment to each work. Explain the goals you followed with your design, techniques and software programs you used, and how the eventual results met (or didn't meet) your expectations. Be aware of catch questions Interviews have become more sophisticated over the recent years. Hiring managers know that most job seekers prepare for the questions in advance, and they try various things to catch them off-guard. One of the common tricks is asking about an ability that actually isn't important for the job, or having it is even a minus rather than a plus. It can be the case also with the question about your creativeness. Think twice about the job you are trying to get. Is creativity really important for it? Or does it play a rather insignificant role? And doesn't it even represent a weakness for this particular position, because the last thing they want from an employee is questioning things and trying to reinvent the wheel? Think about it for a moment, and make sure that you do not belaud your creativity while they want to hear something completely different from you... Ready to answer the question in your interview? Answers Hello, how are you?It would be easy to answer that question with a simple "I'm fine, thank you." Humans are very complex creatures, but we're also creatures of habit who say one thing when we mean another."Fine" is a boring conversation-killer. In reality, "How are you?" could be more than just a simple question—it could be an excellent way to start an interesting conversation!If you're the kind of person who's fed up with the old, so-so, half-hearted replies, then this list is for you! Just pick any of these responses to breathe fresh air into your mundane conversations. Who knows, you might just be able to lead a conversation into a more interesting direction.What to Say Instead of "Fine"Somewhere between better and best. Better now that you asked. Oh stop it, you. (Say it like you're receiving a compliment even though you are not. LOL) I love you. (This is a good response to fluster and catch them off-guard.) Much better now that you are here. At minding my own business? Better than most people. I am as happy as a tick on a big, fat dog. Do you really care? Armed and ready! My lawyer says I don't have to answer that question. What do you want? (Hahaha. This might across as rude, so use with caution.) I've been going through some crests and troughs in my life. Is everything stable at your end? Like you, but better. I could really go for a massage. I'd say I'm a [insert number here] out of 10. I was fine until you asked. If I were doing any better, I'd hire you to enjoy it with me. I hear good things, but you should never listen to rumors. Like a pit bull in a butcher shop [or any other outrageous metaphor]. As fine as a maiden's flaxen hair. Overworked and underpaid. Nothing much. (This one is so trite that it takes a few moments for the humor to sink in.) I don't know, you tell me. How am I right now? Can't complain. Nobody listens anyway. Good enough. (This one will definitely keep them guessing.) If I were any better, I'd be you. Quite how, thank you. (This makes no sense, but it's funny.) Not so well, does that bother you? Nice and dandy like cotton candy. (Dandy rhymes with cotton candy!) I can't complain! It's against the Company Policy. Average. Not terrific, not terrible, just average. If I were any better, I'd be illegal. So far, so good! How dare you! (If you don't have an immediate reply in mind, just say this automatically. LOL) Better now that I'm talking to you. Well, I haven't had my morning coffee yet and no one has gotten hurt, so I'd say so far, so good. Well... unless the weather has different plans in store. Maybe one day you'll be lucky enough to find out. Funny ways to answer the question "how are you?"Donald Giannatti via Unsplash; CanvaWhat to Say Instead of "Fine" or "Good"I have no way of knowing. Yes. (Woah there, it looks like you weren't paying attention.) Living a dream. Please don't wake me up. At least there's plenty of room for improvement! I'm pretty standard right now. Doing well, unless you have intentions of shooting me. Happy and content, thank you. Compared to who? Do I have to answer? Well enough to chat with you if you wish to. Going great. Hope this status quo persists for rest of the day. Physically? Mentally? Spiritually? Socioeconomically? Financially? I'm not sure how to answer that!?! Strange, and getting stranger. Not so good, but I plan on lying at my press conference. If I had a tail, I would wag it. I've heard various opinions: What's yours? How am I... what? Thank you for asking, though you can judge for yourself. Why do you ask? Are you a doctor? Word on the street is that I'm really good. Witty Responses for "How Are You?" TextsI'm better than I was, but not nearly as good as I'm going to be. I think I'm doing OK. How do you think I'm doing? I can't complain, but sometimes I still do. I am blessed! Way better than I deserve! Shhh... it's too early to tell. I dunno. Is it Friday yet? I don't feel that great, but my hair looks awesome, right? I have a pulse, so I must be okay. Doing well, unless you have an airborne disease and infect me with some pathogens. I'm doing really well. [Then pause and say] "Of course, that could be my anti-depressant prescription talking." Oh, you know, every day is better than the next. Better than some, not as good as others. My psychiatrist told me not to discuss it with strangers. Medium well. (What are you, a steak?) All right so far, but there's still time for everything to go horribly wrong. (Ah, the forever pessimist.) Surprising Answers to the Same Old Boring QuestionI'm trying really hard to avoid ambiguous questions at the moment. Wondering how you are. How do you think I am? I'll leave that up to your imagination. It's a secret. Do you want the short or long version? I would be lying if I said I'm fine. I'm pretty sure I am not obligated to tell you. I'm ready for a nap. (I'm sure you are.) Surviving, I guess. Not as good as you. Holy sh*t, you can see me? (This never fails in bringing on the chuckles.) In need of some peace and quiet. Under renovation. Remembering to stay patient. I'm sober! (Congratulations!) On a scale from one to punching someone in the face? Dancing to the rhythm of life. Imagining myself having a fabulous vacation. Horrible, now that I've met you. You do not want to know. [just stare] That is a really wonderful question. Ummm... Happy and you know it. [clap your hands] Next question, please. Clever and Unique Responses to "How Are You?"In order to answer the question, I need to take you back about ten years. Do you have a moment? Living a life of denial and suppressed rage. Slowly but surely dying. Fair to partly cloudy. "Hey look over there!" [punch person in the throat] (Remember kids, do not try this at home.) Groovy! Well, I've got this rash on my left butt cheek. (Way to make the conversation awkward!) Not bad. Could be better. Could be payday. Better on the inside than I look on the outside. Great, stellar, fantastic... but dead inside. Okay, since my name wasn't in today's obituaries. Oh terrible, but I'm used to it. (I feel you, friend.) What's with all the questions? You a cop? As opposed to what? Sunshine all day long! You go first so we can compare. I'm not sure yet. Living the dream... but half the time it's a nightmare. Not quite there yet. (Where is there?) Dangerously close to fabulous. You're lookin' at it. Real terrible, thanks for asking. I am high-quality. The doctor said I'd live. Better Answers for "How Are You Doing?"I'm sure you have that information on your screen. How much will you pay me if I tell you? Living the dream! WHYY? WHAT ARE THEY SAYING ABOUT ME? (Hahaha! Way to act suspicious of everything!) I'm busy taking over the world. Dying. Hunting dragons. You? I promised myself I would kill the next person who asked me that question, but I like you so I will let you live. Rolling with the punches. [speaks gibberish!] Your attempt at social interaction is hereby acknowledged. Not today, Satan! Flirty Responses to "How Are You?" Incredibly good looking. Everything is fine with you around. I'd be better if you asked me out. Great, but I'm totally biased. How am... in bed? (Wait, what?!) Getting better with every passing minute. What an impertinent question to ask a girl [or guy]! Living a dream. Don't wake me up. You may join me. There's plenty of room. The best I can be. Assuming you're your best, too. I am so great I have to sit on my hands to keep myself from clapping. Read 100 Flirty Responses to "How Are You?" or "What's Up?" for more ideas.How to Answer "How Are You?" When You're Not OkayI'm still sucking air. I'm completely prepared for the end of the world. They told me you would ask me that. Better than nothing. Well, I'm still alive. Could be better... [pause]... could be worse. Somewhere between blah and meh. I'll let you know when I figure it out. Do you want an honest answer or the one you were expecting? Vertical and breathing. Different day, same existence. Trying to get on with life, thanks. What about you? Trying not to burst into tears. I get an "A" for effort, right? Navigating the twists and turns of life. I hope yours is a straight road. Just hug me and leave it at that.
